Dems Seek Bush-Era Probes

Senator decries Cheney's secret program as 'a big problem'

WASHINGTON | Six months into Barack Obama's presidency, his Democratic allies are pushing for twin investigations into Bush-era torture and anti-terrorism policies.

Two senators, including the head of the intelligence committee, suggested Sunday that the prior administration broke the law by concealing a CIA counterterrorism program from Congress.

The assertion that then-Vice President

Dick Cheney ordered the concealment came amid word that Attorney General Eric Holder is contemplating opening a criminal probe of possible CIA torture.

A move to appoint a criminal prosecutor is certain to stir partisan bickering that could prove a distraction to Obama's efforts to push ambitious health care and energy reform. Obama has repeatedly expressed reluctance to probing alleged

Cheney

Bush-era abuses, saying the nation should be "looking forward and not backwards."

Regarding the 8-year-old counterterrorism program, the Bush administration's failure to notify Congress "is a big problem," said Senate Intelligence Committee chairwoman Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif. Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill., said the secrecy "could be illegal." (AP)

The 13th Annual Summer Redneck Games in Dublin, Ga., (begun in 1996 as an answer to the Summer Olympics in Atlanta) saw its usual roster of bobbing for pigs' feet, hubcap throwing, watermelon-seed spitting and mud pit belly flopping this year. Palin Says She's Still In Politics

Governor says she'll campaign for people who share her views

WASHINGTON | Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin said she's not only staying involved in national politics, but she plans to jump back into the national scrum when she leaves office at the end of the month.

Palin

Palin said she plans to write a book, campaign for political candidates from coast to coast — even Democrats who share her views — and build a right-of-center coalition.

"I will go around the country on behalf of candidates who believe in the right things, regardless of their party label or affiliation," she said in an interview published Sunday in The Washington Times.

Palin plans to write a memoir but declined to discuss any potential deal for her to become a television commentator.

"I can't talk about any of those things while I'm still governor," she said. (AP)

Sotomayor Moves to Center Stage

GOP promises tough questions at hearings for Obama's nominee

WASHINGTON | Sonia Sotomayor has decided advantages as she begins the most important trial of her long legal career, a nationally televised consideration of her nomination to be the first Hispanic on the Supreme Court.

Beginning Monday, she will tell her compelling up-from-poverty story to a jury tilted in her favor — Democrats hold a comfortable majority on the Senate Judiciary Committee and a filibuster-resistant 60 votes in the Senate.

Still, Republicans signaled that they will press the 55-year-old New Yorker and federal judge to explain past rulings involving discrimination complaints and gun rights. The sharpest comments about her so far came Sunday from Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama, the senior Republican on the committee.

Sotomayor has said repeatedly in speeches over the past 10 years that personal experiences influence a judge's decisions, Sessions said.

"She has criticized the idea that a woman and a man would reach the same result. She expects them to reach different results. I think that's philosophically incompatible with the American system," Sessions said.

The questioning of Sotomayor won't begin until Tuesday, after the 12 Democrats and seven Republicans on the committee use up to 10 minutes each for preliminary remarks and the nominee makes her opening statement.

Suspect Arrested in Slaying

Fla. couple with 16 kids were killed in their home on Thu.

PENSACOLA, FLA. | Authorities say they have someone in custody in the slayings of a Florida couple known for their large family of adopted children.

Byrd and Melanie Billings of Beulah were killed in their home Thursday as eight of their children slept. It happened in a rural area west of Pensacola near the Alabama state line.

Police say the couple had an extensive surveillance system in the house that recorded three apparently experienced criminals who drove off in a red van.

Officials still don't know why the family was targeted. Police have not said whether anything was stolen from the home, which had nine bedrooms to accommodate the large family.

The couple was well-known locally for adopting children with developmental disabilities. They owned several businesses, including a finance company and a used car dealership.

The Billingses had 16 children, 12 of them adopted. Investigators interviewed the children, who are now staying with other family.

The couple married 18 years ago, and each had two children from previous marriages. They eventually started adopting children with developmental disabilities and other problems. (AP)

R.I. Legislators Challenge the Odds

Increasing dog racing is seen as way to save jobs, retain revenue

LINCOLN, R.I. | Greyhound tracks are folding across the country, but in cash-strapped Rhode Island — where the unemployment rate is among the nation's worst — lawmakers are betting on the dogs to save jobs.

Rhode Island legislators are fighting to expand greyhound racing, an increasingly outdated and unprofitable sport that has been squeezed out by newer forms of gambling. Over the objection of Gov. Don Carcieri, lawmakers have moved to force a bankrupt, state-licensed slot parlor to run 200 days of live racing at its greyhound track even though current law requires only 125.

Carcieri, a Republican, vetoed the legislation, but lawmakers in Rhode Island legislators are fighting to expand greyhound racing in the state.

the General Assembly say they expect to override it.

Supporters of the racing bill say it's necessary to save jobs and preserve tax revenue.

They also argue the public shouldn't be penalized for what they say are the bad business decisions of the owners of the gambling parlor, called Twin River.

"I did not want to see more people out of work," said Sen. Frank Ciccone III, the bill's sponsor.

The move bucks a national trend away from greyhound racing. In the last year, Massachusetts voters banned greyhound racing amid allegations the dogs were mistreated. In New Hampshire, the last two remaining greyhound tracks won state permission last month to end live racing after waning interest from bettors. (AP)

AU Intervenes in Somali Fighting

Dozens are killed as government battles insurgents in capital

MOGADISHU, SOMALIA | Islamic insurgents fought their way toward Somalia's presidential palace Sunday in fighting that killed dozens and wounded about 150, officials said. African Union peacekeepers directly intervened for the first time to support government forces.

An Associated Press reporter saw several bodies and two AU tanks on the front line. Government forces used rocket-propelled grenades and anti-aircraft guns mounted on the back of trucks, which they fired in the streets.

"The fighting in Mogadishu has entered a new phase," said Ali Mohamud Rage, a spokesman for the al-Shabab rebel group, which is believed to have ties to al-Qaeda. Al-Shabab denies any ties. "Now it's between us and the AMISOM," he said, referring to the AU peacekeeping force's acronym.

A man carries his injured child to a hospital in Mogadishu, Somalia, Sunday.

The AU was drawn into the fighting after the insurgents advanced into the north of the capital and directly threatened their positions, a spokesman said.

The city's main Medina hospital was chaos, with bloodied nurses performing frantic triage and a tent set up outside to deal with the overflow of casualties. Screaming relatives begged for help.

Medina hospital official Dun-iya Ali Mohamed said hospital workers had not slept for the last 24 hours.

"These are the worst armed clashes in the capital for the last two months," she said. (AP)

A car bomb exploded near a church as worshippers left Sunday Mass, killing at least four civilians and injuring 18 in one of several attacks on Iraq's beleaguered Christian minority. Afghan Blast Kills 2 Marines

American casualties come after 8 British deaths in Helmand

KABUL | A bomb blast killed two U.S. Marines in Afghanistan's dangerous south, where thousands of American troops have deployed in a massive operation to oust Taliban fighters from the country's opium poppy region, officials said Sunday.

About 4,000 Marines moved into Helmand province this month, the largest Marine operation in Afghanistan since the 2001 U.S. invasion. They have met little head-on resistance but remain vulnerable to guerrilla tactics like suicide and roadside bombs.

The two Marines were killed Saturday in Helmand. Military officials did not release any other details. The American casualties come after eight British deaths in Helmand in a 24-hour period ending Friday, triggering debate in Britain about its role in Afghanistan. Britain has now lost more troops in Afghanistan than in Iraq. JASON STRAZIUSO (AP)

Government reveals 1,680 injured in last week's ethnic clashes

URUMQI, CHINA | Incense was lit and paper money burned at the funeral Sunday for a Han Chinese family — a man, his wife and his parents, all killed in last week's ethnic riots. Three Uighur neighbors approached, standing tentatively apart.

Then, one of the neighbors grasped hands with a mourning sister and wailed in sympathy.

It was a small gesture of shared grief on a day when Han Chinese mourned their dead and Uighurs dealt with mounting surveillance in the regional capital of Urumqi.

Han and Uighur alike are struggling to overcome the resentment exposed by the worst ethnic violence in China in decades, clashes on July 5 that left 184 people dead. On Sunday, the regional Xinjiang government raised the toll of injured that day to 1,680.

The violence began as Uighurs

Iranian officials who had been detained by the U.S. in Iraq for more than two years arrive at the airport in Tehran on Sunday.

U.S. Frees 5 Iran Officials

Men were held 2 years due to suspicion they aided Shiite militants

TEHRAN, IRAN | Five Iranian officials held in Iraq for more than two years by U.S. forces returned home Sunday after the U.S. released them under pressure from the Iraqi government.

American officials said a U.S.-Iraqi security agreement required that they hand the men over but said they fear the Iranians — held on suspicion of aiding Shiite militants — pose a threat to U.S. troops in Iraq.

The five men were handed over to Iraqi officials Thursday and flew Sunday to Tehran, where they were met at the airport by a cheering crowd of onlookers who carried the men on their shoulders and put garlands of flowers around their necks.

Iran's foreign minister, Manouchehr Mottaki, in a news conference with the men welcomed them back and praised what he described as their courageous resistance while being held in Iraq by U.S. forces.

The Iranians were detained in the northern Iraqi city of Irbil in January 2007. At the time, U.S.

authorities said the men included the operations chief and other members of Iran's elite Quds Force, which is accused of arming and training Iraqi militants.

Iran denied the claim and has described the men as diplomats who were kidnapped by U.S. forces. Mottaki accused President Obama of continuing the bullying practices of the Bush administration by detaining the officials.

The U.S. has long charged that Iran is behind much of the violence in Iraq, and has been financing and assisting Shiite militias in attacks against U.S. and Iraqi forces. NASSER KARIMI AND REBECCA SANTANA (AP)

Swiss Hostage Is Released in Mali

BERN, SWITZERLAND | A Swiss tourist taken hostage in North Africa in January has been released to authorities in Mali, officials said Sunday.

The health of the Swiss citizen, who had been held in Mali after his capture with three other European tourists, appears to be reasonably good considering the six-month ordeal, according to information received by Swiss representatives in Mali, a Foreign Ministry official said.

Two of the other hostages were released in April, and the third was killed in May.

The release was the second in a matter of hours on opposite sides of the world of hostages being held by al-Qaeda-linked groups. In the Philippines, militants freed an Italian Red Cross worker. (AP)

Laura Musall learned the hard way that repairing a car can be harder than it seems.

Truth Is, You Can't Handle It

Fixing a car yourself may seem like a way to cut costs, but the move can backfire

NEW YORK | When the taillight of Laura Musall's five-year-old Nissan Altima burned out, she hoped to avoid the repair shop by letting her husband replace it at home. It seemed simple enough: Buy a bulb, pop off the cover and make the switch.

But her husband struggled to remove the plastic casing, and when he used a screwdriver to pry it off, it shattered. What came next was even worse. Her Nissan dealer wanted $250 to order a new one.

Musall, a real estate agent from Fishers, Ind., figured "10 bucks, we'd be done." "But, apparently, it's not a do-it-yourself thing if you don't know what you're doing."

Car owners looking to trim expenses are sidestepping the mechanic and plunging into their own repairs — or trying to, anyway.

The increase in queries for the term "car repairs" on Yahoo's search engine in the past month.

Their efforts can backfire, costing more in the end and creating do-it-yourself horror stories.

Mechanics say they've seen it all in recent months, including incorrectly applied brake pads and anti-freeze poured into engines.

While well-intentioned, many people forget that today's cars are vastly more complicated than models made just years ago.

"[Repair work] is even going beyond the heads of a lot of technicians who aren't keeping up-to-date," said Dave Striegel, owner of an auto shop in Elizabeth, Pa.

Musall says she's learned her lesson. Her husband won't be laying his hands on the car anytime soon.

"It's all fixed," she said, "and he's not going to do any more car repairs." CHIP CUTTER (AP)

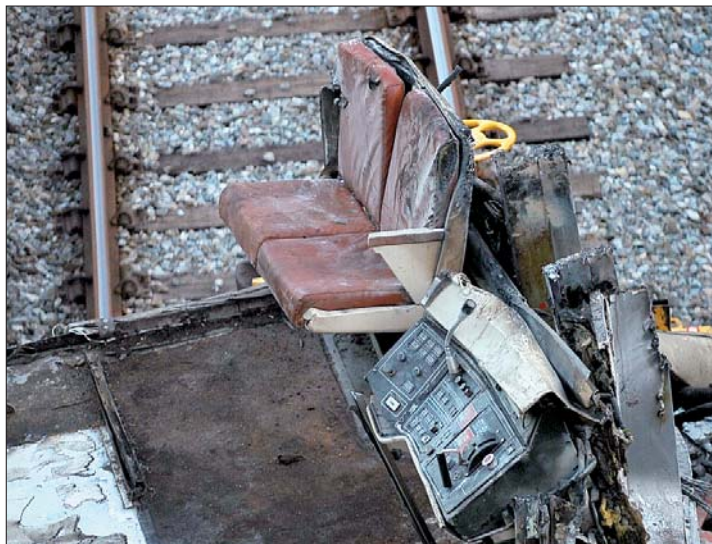

Metro Braces for Crash Lawsuits

Damages could run into tens of millions after deadly collision

First came the crash and the rescue efforts. Then the news conferences, the memorial services and the official investigations. Now come the lawsuits.

It took just two days after last month's deadly Metro crash for the first personal injury lawsuit to be filed in federal court. Five others have followed, one seeking as much as $25 million in damages. Legal experts said the number of liability claims for the crash, which killed nine and injured 80, can be expected to rise for months and, perhaps, years.

Legal damages could run into the tens of millions of dollars and, if negligence is proved and punitive damages awarded, they could easily reach into the hundreds of millions, legal analysts said. Wherever federal authorities place responsibility for the tragedy, plaintiffs will be seeking money, first and foremost from Metro.

The remains of a rail car damaged in the June 22 Metro crash that killed nine and injured 80. It took just two days for the first injury lawsuit to be filed against Metro.

"The subway system has such a deep pocket, there's no reason to go beyond," said John Cooper, a personal injury lawyer in Virginia Beach and chairman of the railroad law section of the American Association for Justice, a trade group for trial lawyers.

FINANCIAL RESTITUTION

Metro has settled lawsuits with payouts recently:

→ This year, Metro agreed to pay $2.9 million to settle a lawsuit filed by the family of Sally D. McGhee, who was struck and killed by a Metrobus in 2007.

→ Metro paid $2.3 million to settle claims for Martha Schoenborn, also killed in the incident.

Metro officials also said it is highly likely that the agency will need to retain outside counsel to handle the claims. Officials at Metro said in a statement that it is too early to estimate the liability but that they "are confident that we will be able to meet our financial obligations."

None of the jurisdictions that fund Metro would be liable for last month's accident, officials said. JOE STEPHENS AND LENA H. SUN (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Mom of 4 Dead Girls Set for Trial

WASHINGTON | A woman accused of killing her four daughters and living with their decomposing bodies for nearly seven months goes on trial Monday.

The case of 35-year-old Banita Jacks horrified the Washington region and led to changes in how city agencies deal with social work cases.

The bodies were found in January 2008 when marshals arrived at Jacks' Southeast Washington home to carry out an eviction.

Jacks

Authorities said the girls had been dead since the summer of 2007.

Investigators ultimately concluded that one of the girls had been stabbed, another had been strangled and beaten, and the other two had been strangled.

Defense attorneys not involved with the case say prosecutors will have to produce evidence that Jacks actually killed the children.

A judge, not a jury, will determine whether she's guilty. (AP)

A Fitting End to the Nats' 1st Half

Washington blanked in Houston a day after an offensive explosion

NATIONALS | Kaz Matsui's three-run homer led the Houston Astros to a 5-0 win over the Washington Nationals on Sunday.

A day after getting their most runs (13) and hits (21) of the season, the Nationals got 11 hits but couldn't convert, leaving 13 men on base.

Matsui's shot to the first row of the stands in right field near the bullpen came in the seventh inning and gave Houston a 4-0 lead.

The Astros got another solid start from Brian Moehler (6-5), who allowed seven hits in 6 1/3 innings to win for the fourth time in five decisions. The win gives the Astros a 3-1 series victory over the last-place Nationals.

eighth inning when Lance Berkman scored on a balk by Tyler Clippard, who looked to have lost his balance and almost fell off the mound.

Geoff Blum was hit by a pitch in the seventh before Hunter Pence singled. Ivan Rodriguez struck out before Matsui's homer. Nationals starter Jordan Zimmermann (3-4) walked reliever Alberto Arias before he was replaced by Joe Beimel, who finally got out of the inning.

Wil Nieves, who led the Nationals with four hits, singled in the seventh before advancing to second on a sacrifice bunt by Zimmermann.

Moehler was replaced by Arias, who allowed a single by Nyjer Morgan. Nick Johnson walked to load the bases for the second-straight inning, but the Nationals came away empty again after Ryan Zimmerman popped out and Adam Dunn grounded out.

Closer Jose Valverde got the last four outs for his eighth save of the season and the 150th of his career. KRISTIE RIEKEN (AP)

O's Fly Into Break With Series Win

Bergesen dominates Toronto as Salazar homers for Baltimore

ORIOLES | Brad Bergesen took a shutout into the seventh inning, Brian Roberts had two RBI and the Baltimore Orioles beat Toronto 4-2 Sunday to end a miserable road trip for the Blue Jays.

Oscar Salazar homered and Roberts also scored a run for the Orioles, who took two of three from Toronto. Baltimore has won six of its last nine series and trails the fourth-place Blue Jays by only three games in the AL East.

Toronto has lost 12 of 15 and went 2-8 on a swing through Yankee Stadium, Tampa Bay and Baltimore.

Bergesen (6-3) gave up two runs and seven hits in 6 2/3 innings. The rookie took a 3-0 lead into the seventh, but was pulled after the Blue Jays used three hits and a sacrifice fly to get within a run.

Danys Baez got the final out in the seventh, Jim Johnson worked the eighth, and George Sherrill retired three straight to earn his 20th save. DAVID GINSBURG (AP)

Armstrong: Alps May Decide Tour

7-time champ is still in 3rd place; Fedrigo wins the 9th stage

CYCLING | Lance Armstrong stayed in third place at the Tour de France on Sunday after a deliberate ride on the last day in the Pyrenees.

Pierrick Fedrigo of France sped past a lone rival in a breakaway to win the mountainous ninth stage.

Rinaldo Nocentini of Italy held the yellow jersey for a third-straight day. He is followed in the overall standings by Astana teammates Alberto Contador and Armstrong.

"Today was pretty controlled, I thought, although it's never easy," Armstrong said. "It was very hot; the tempo was pretty regular."

Nocentini is six seconds ahead of Contador, the 2007 champion. Armstrong, the seven-time champion, is eight seconds behind. "We [Astana] just sat there and kind of rode our race," Armstrong said.

Levi Leipheimer of the United States follows Armstrong in the standings, 39 seconds behind Nocentini, giving Astana the second, third and fourth spots.

big shakeout will come in Stage 15, when riders go from Pontarlier, France, to the Swiss ski resort of Verbier, featuring an uphill finish along the Alps.

ANOTHER TOUR?

→ Lance Armstrong says he could be back for one more Tour de France. The 37-year-old was asked whether this will be his last one. "Probably not," Armstrong said on France-2 after Sunday's ninth stage. "Maybe one more Tour." He has previously hinted he may launch his own team next season. (AP)

"Now we're going to have three or four days that probably won't change the classification," he said. "I think all of the favorites are considering that Verbier is the next big test," he said. JAMEY KEATEN (AP)

Gatti's Wife Detained As Suspect in Death

Ex-boxing champion appears to have been strangled in Brazil

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL | The wife of former boxing champion Arturo Gatti was detained as a suspect by Brazilian authorities Sunday after his death at a posh seaside resort.

Police said 23-year-old Amanda Rodrigues was taken into custody after contradictions in her interrogation. Gatti's body was found early Saturday in a hotel room at the Porto de Galinhas resort in northeastern Brazil.

The former junior welterweight champion was apparently strangled with the strap of a purse, which was found at the scene with blood stains, said Milena Saraiva,

If You Can Dance, Teach

André Cleofe ditched his job with American Express to help others max out their moves

So, you think you can dance? If not, André Cleofe may be the man to see.

Cleofe, 33, dances for a living. He never expected to — who does? — but his family was always foot-loose; older folks twirled children at gatherings, and Cleofe's father once practiced by dancing with a towel tied to a doorknob.

After emigrating from the Philippines, Cleofe did economic research, then worked at American Express in the pay-by-phone division — talking with customers who didn't understand their statement or had overspent their limit — first as a call taker and then as a supervisor.

He was almost ready to become head of the supervisors when burn-out struck. On a leave of absence, he visited relatives. As always, a little dancing ensued. This time, someone suggested that he look into Arthur Murray Franchised Dance Studios.

It was May 2003. He called the Silver Spring location (there are six in the Washington area) and walked in curiously. Staffers in a meeting looked back just as curiously: Cleofe was wearing a suit.

Teaching there was one option; a new customer-service gig was another. But then Cleofe realized he'd have to start at the bottom again. The next week he signed on for a different sort of customer service: teaching people to dance.

Franchise owners look for aptitude, not expertise, says Silver Spring owner Linda Theiss. Would-be instructors often have a theater or performance background, and a patient, caring personality is important.

There are three phases of training Arthur Murray instructors: learning the steps of each dance, learning the steps from the other gender's perspective (all instructors must be able to lead and to follow), and learning to convey them with encouragement and polish.

All this usually takes six to eight weeks, Theiss says, the first of which is a trial period. Student instructors are unpaid and train from about 1 to 4:30 p.m. or 5:30 to 9:30 p.m. Most find training more strenuous than they'd thought.

They may also be surprised that it's free. "It's worth thousands," Theiss says. "The agreement is that they'll teach for us for at least a year. Most instructors go way beyond that." Some have been with her eight years.

Once Cleofe's class of four had mastered everything from salsa to waltz to merengue, they stepped into a month of shadowing an experienced instructor before giving their first private lessons solo.

Most instructors teach full time. "It's too much fun to do it part time," Cleofe says. Because evening work is required, he hasn't followed the TV dance-show craze. He does have to explain to clients that less than an hour a week will not make them look like those glitzy couples who've been practicing all day for months.

“YOU GET TO LISTEN TO BEAUTIFUL MUSIC. IT'S GREAT EXERCISE, PHYSICALLY AND MENTALLY. AND PEOPLE WANT TO BE HERE! HOW MANY JOBS DO YOU KNOW LIKE THAT?”

Cleofe, who did practice all day for months, became an instructor of instructors in two-thirds of a year — a much faster rise than to a similar position at American

Would-be instructors often have a performance background, and a caring personality is important.

Express. There he handled up to 120 clients a day; by contrast, dance instructors can form bonds with their students. But Arthur Murray rules against favoritism, even when engaged couples want to invite their instructor to the wedding.

The courtly Cleofe sees himself at Arthur Murray “at least five or six years into the future.” He cuts a rug up to eight hours a day but also runs and works out. “Students say, ‘You’re crazy,’ but doing just one thing for exercise could mean injuries,” he says. For fun, instructors often — wait for it — go out dancing. “You can get more creative without the syllabus,” he explains.

Downsides include blisters, especially early on; frustration when a client just doesn't get it; and friction within a couple when one does and one doesn't get it. And salaries aren't high: At the Silver Spring studio, instructors make $22,000 their first year, $30,000 within two years and about $50,000 with several years and top skills.

But these are outweighed by upsides: seeing clients grow confident and skilled, and seeing students' partners come to enjoy it as much as they do. One regular student, he recalls, “lost weight, feels better and is now passionate about dancing.”

So is Cleofe. As Theiss says, “You get to listen to beautiful music. It's great exercise, physically and mentally. And people want to be here! How many jobs do you know like that? We're enhancing people's lives.” ELLEN RYAN

Get Cleared For Hiring

Security authorization is required for a ton of jobs and is not as scary as you think

The economy is slumping. Companies in every sector are distributing pink slips. But there's one entity that's unlikely to go out of business: the federal government. In times like these, applying for a stable federal job sounds extra-appealing. With that security often come security clearances, though. Would you be eligible to nab one?

Even as the economy founders, the number of federal jobs requiring security clearances is growing.

"There's been kind of a continual increase in the number of jobs that require clearance that are out there,” says Evan Lesser, director of ClearanceJobs.com. “We’ve been tracking this stuff since early 2002, and there’s been a year-over-year increase. Really, the reason is No. 1 if you look at the budgets for the government in terms of homeland security and defense. They’ve ranged, at least in the past few years, in the $400 [billion] to $450 billion range. It’s a huge, huge amount of money being spent.”

Lesser attributes the rise to larger defense and homeland security budgets and retiring baby boomers, who take their clearances with them when they go. “At this point, we really don’t see a whole lot of slowdown for the next couple years,” he adds.

But before you rush to USAJobs.gov, realize you can’t apply for a clearance on your own. A federal agency or contractor must sponsor you, Lesser says.

Fear rejection? “Keep your nose clean” and you’ll be fine, says Kathy Dillaman, associate director of the Office of Personnel Management’s Federal Investigative Services Division. Background investigators consider three things, she says: character, conduct and record. Her advice: Avoid legal run-ins, maintain good credit and employment records, and be truthful on your application.

“I’m often asked this: ‘What can I do to make this process better and faster?’ Well, it starts with you and honesty,” Dillaman says. “You’re asked to fill out a form about your background. Do your research. Fill it out fully and accurately, because if we start an investigation and you failed to provide information on your background, I can’t tell if you’re being dishonest or just sloppy.”

The biggest reason someone is denied a clearance? “Dishonesty. Period.”

If a job requires a clearance, the description will probably say so, but if it doesn’t, consider how likely you’d be to deal with classified information in that position. Dillaman defines “classified information” as information that, if it were widely known, could harm the government, its programs, its people or its infrastructure. If you’re going to have access or need to be eligible to have access to classified info, you need a clearance, she says.

If you have a clearance already and you apply for a federal position, you’re golden; the clearance follows you because all clearances are issued-based on the same national guidelines. If you don’t, you can still be hired. After you’ve landed an offer, the hiring agency may consider issuing you an interim clearance based on preliminary results of your background check while the full investigation is conducted.

“The process is pretty simple,” Dillaman says. Your employer determines which of three clearance levels — confidential, secret or top secret — you need. Then you have to fill out a standard electronic form, have a fingerprint check and sign a waiver stating you know you’re being investigated, she says.

Nationally, 75 percent of investigations are for the confidential and secret levels, she says. Investigation time depends on how extensive the background is. “The higher level of clearance, the more extensive the background investigation,” she says.

“Essentially, once the paperwork is submitted, it’s a long waiting game and not a lot of information along the way,” Lesser says.

Angela Bailey, OPM’s deputy associate director of the Center for Talent and Capacity Policy, says that’s about to change. The agency is overhauling the application process to better stay in contact with candidates. “It’s all about managing their expectations,” she says. “If things are going to take a little longer because you need a top-secret security clearance, I think people are willing to accept that if you at least stay in touch with them and let them know along the way where they are in the process.”

Costs also fluctuate. Clearances at the confidential and secret levels can be as inexpensive as $220, while top-secret can be as much as $4,000, Dillaman says. The hiring agency covers the cost.

OPM does 90 percent of the government’s investigations, including those for the Defense Department, the biggest employing agency for clearance jobs, she says.

The personnel security process has three parts, says Eric Butterbaugh, a Pentagon spokesman:

1. The request for investigation. The security office of each military unit, government agency or cleared contractor facility must request the appropriate investigation.
2. The personnel security investigation, including interviews with the candidate and reference.
3. The adjudication. The requesting agency’s Central Adjudication Facility is responsible for making an adjudicative decision.

A few agencies, including the FBI and the Homeland Security, State and Treasury departments handle their own inquiries.

At State, all Foreign Service positions require top-secret clearances, and most Civil Service jobs require either secret or top secret. On average, less than 2 percent of applicants are denied, because the vetting process is so detailed before an offer is extended, a department official says.

Employees with clearances generally earn 22 percent more than someone doing the same job without a need for classified access, Lesser says.

“D.C. is definitely the highest-paying location in the United States for security clearance candidates. The most jobs are available in the metro D.C. area. The range of positions is exceptional,” he says. STEPHANIE KANOWITZ

Spin a Strong Yarn

SpeakeasyDC offers a workshop on telling yawn-proof stories with gusto and humor

Plenty of loudmouths might think they spin a nice yarn — a long-winded uncle springs to mind — but the genuinely good storytellers are rare. And no matter how fascinating the fodder, a story is only as engaging as its teller. This inconvenient truth is to blame for many a glassy stare at family reunions and in boardroom meetings.

Enter SpeakeasyDC, a storytelling organization that offers coaching and training for wannabe raconteurs. Regular options include four-week sessions and one-day, six-hour boot camps for commitment-phobes. Classes support SpeakeasyDC's monthly open mic series and other special events.

But don't come expecting folktales, says Amy Saidman, director of Speakeasy-DC. The troop focuses on true personal narratives, from goofy coming-of-age anecdotes to painfully emotional experiences.

At the workshop, instructors (aka storytelling coaches) will give you the basics.

"People love the window into the worlds of others," Saidman explains. "People can be exposed, but not in a raw, AA kind of way."

The Basics

"Storytelling Boot Camp" is a crash-course introductory offering open to a maximum of 18 participants.

Students needn't stress about story ideas beforehand. Experienced storytelling coaches (one per every six students) get the class' creative juices flowing with a series of brainstorming exercises.

"We try to help people tap into their memories and see what's there," Saidman says. "Often, they'll be surprised at what has come to surface and what they're excited to tell."

Students then pick one "story feed" to develop, which they shape and start to polish into seven-minute vignettes with the help of feedback from other participants and coaches. The workshop culminates in a final small-group performance.

What You'll Learn

Students learn basic story structure and performance techniques, such as devising distinct character voices and debating how far the truth can be fudged. "People lose the thread of their story and their point, so a lot of my coaching is peeling away some of the stuff that's not necessary," Saidman says.

What's the Deal?

SpeakeasyDC's next "Storytelling Boot Camp" will be held Aug.

1 from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at St. Stephen and the Incarnation Episcopal Church (1525 Newton St. NW). The workshop costs $85, or $110 with a half-hour private coaching session. Register at speakeasydc.org. KATIE KNOROVSKY bachelor's degree until she was in her 30s.

Author Valencia Campbell shares these and other stories in her book, "Advice From the Top: What Minority Women Say About Their Career Success" (ABC-CLIO, $39.95). Campbell, a Maryland-based consultant on educational topics and women's issues, traces the careers of 14 successful minority businesswomen to find out what challenges they faced and how they worked their way up the ladder. We spoke with Campbell to see what others can learn from the women's experiences.

What inspired you to write this book?

Being involved with group called 9to5, the National Association of Working Women. It had a hotline that involved helping women with questions about workplace issues. One of the things that I found was that most of those complaints were always fairly negative. So, I started thinking, "What would be a really good thing to do where a larger group of people could benefit from knowing how women succeeded in the workplace?"

Do successful minority women tend to get as much attention as they deserve?

I think in many instances, women all over the country may be getting some recognition, but we don't tend to know about it as far as it being published. That, to me, is one of the larger problems. You could probably think of women you know who have done very well, but if no one else gets to know about these women, it's only their own pool of contact who might be aware of them.

What were some of the keys to their success?

Mentors were quite important. If you read their stories, I think you can see how each of them had other people in their lives who were so beneficial in helping them move forward.

What do you hope people take away from this book?

I hope that they will be inspired to help mentor someone else in their career ... and to share their knowledge about how they were successful in the workplace. And that's how we really learn over time, hearing about the stories and using the information that would be beneficial to us.

A Pirate's Life for Her

→ NAME: Kassy Freely, or "Poppet" the pirate
→ JOB: Kassy performs with the Vagabonds, a pirate entertainment group. She also waitresses in character at Piratz Tavern in Silver Spring.
→ SALARY: $20,000
→ WHAT SHE DOES: Poppet brings some serious pirate sass to the performance group, which includes a belly dancer, a fire-breather and a sword slinger. The group performs weekly at Piratz Tavern, and also is hired out for parties and other events. Poppet, Freely's pirate persona, is the attitude-laden, trash-talking character who won't put up with a certain "w" word: "A guy came into Piratz, and he said, 'Where's my grog, wench?' I put my [real] dagger in the table and said, 'You call me a wench and this will go in your gut.'"

→ WOULD YOU WANT THIS JOB?
Being a pirate is a great way to act out, and it's the one profession that actually encourages misbehaving on the job. It's all about getting into a fun character who can be either an extension of yourself or the complete opposite.

Poppet is a no-nonsense kind of pirate — avoid using "wench" in her presence.

→ HOW SHE GOT THIS JOB:
Freely was a regular at local Renaissance festivals but was looking for something different: "I had all my clothes and I loved it, but I hadn't quite found my role there." Having already been pirate-minded — her all-time favorite movie is "Yellowbeard" — she naturally gravitated to a pirate group her friend was in. Poppet was born out of Madeline Kahn's defiant character from the movie.

→ HOW YOU CAN GET THIS JOB:
There are two options: 1) Find some (hopefully, friendly) pirates, befriend and join, or 2) Get some friends and start your own troupe. Freely lists the Laughing Man Tavern and, of course, Piratz Tavern as two places where pirates convene. Immerse yourself in a character, which, of course, means working on that Keith Richards drawl.

Put on Your Game Face

Throw your interview jitters to the wind by harnessing butterflies and preparing well

Interviewing for a job is akin to performing onstage: Knowing you have only one chance to get it right can make nearly anyone nervous. But you can tame those jitters and prevent them from jolting an interview off course.

"It's like having butterflies before you go onstage to perform — a small amount of them is good, so that your body and your mind are ready for the experience," said

Marsha Lindquist, a career consultant in Prescott, Ariz.

Anxiety surrounding the interview process may intensify in a troubled economy, when there is more at stake. It's much easier to feel less pressure when the outcome seems not so critical or when the interview is one of many scheduled, said Kathy Albarado, chief executive of Helios, which serves companies in the Washington area.

Because of the pressure, job candidates should try even harder to keep calm, said Shira Harrington, director of professional search at Positions Inc. in the District. If you're unemployed, act like you have a job and are just looking for your next career move.

Researching an organization before the interview will calm your nerves while providing an impressive platform for discussion. Review its Web site thoroughly, try to find people who work or have worked there, and ask the recruiter for any information he or she can provide. Employers are impressed if you ask intelligent questions related to the organization, Harrington said.

The conversation should help both parties gauge whether the position and environment are a good fit. "You have just as much right to say 'no' as they do if you don't feel the click. Knowing that puts you more in a balanced relationship," Harrington said. SUSAN KREIMER

Smart Summer Love

Joseph Gordon-Levitt and Zooey Deschanel star in a clever, quirky romantic comedy

COUPLE | “(500) Days of Summer,” opening Friday, sounds like the title of a surfing movie, but it’s actually a love story, though unconventional in setup, direction and outcome.

Tom, a would-be architect, has settled for a job at a Los Angeles greeting card company where he writes mundane sentiments for people who are too afraid or lazy to express their feelings themselves. Despite a job he abhors, Tom remains a romantic and an optimist. He sketches buildings on his lunch hour and he believes in cosmic destiny and in finding true love.

One day he spies a new girl at the office and is smitten.

Summer, as the viewer comes to find out, is a practical girl with a practical attitude about romance. She’s not looking for Mr. Right or even her so-called soul mate. She simply wants to have fun, with no strings attached, which she makes clear to Tom from the outset. Over the next year and the half, the two office mates become more than friends but never quite reach the status of boyfriend and girlfriend, despite Tom’s best efforts.

Besides the unconventional story line, the movie unfolds in an unconventional way. Told entirely from Tom’s perspective, it is non-linear, jumping backward and forward to various days in the couple’s relationship so the viewer knows fairly early on about the outcome. What matters more is how they got to where they are.

“(500) Days of Summer” stars Zooey Deschanel (“Yes Man,” “Elf”) and Joseph Gordon-Levitt (“Stop-Loss,” “The Lookout”) as Summer and Tom, respectively. The two previously co-starred in the 2001 drama “Manic,” in which they played abused and emotionally troubled teens.

“I think when you make something that is entertaining and smart, people will find and appreciate it.”

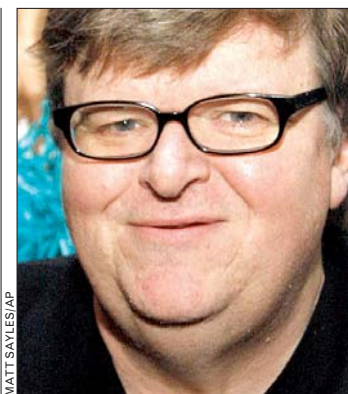

The duo liked “(500)’s” unconventional plot and unique style.

“One thing that this movie says about love is that just because something doesn’t last, it doesn’t mean it doesn’t have value,” says Deschanel. “It says you will discover things about yourself if you’re being romantic even if it doesn’t last.”

Deschanel sees the romantic comedy as a counterbalance to all the big action and special effects-laden movies it is competing with at the box office this summer.

“This is a movie that is my taste, and it’s really nice,” she says. “I think that when you make something that is entertaining and smart, people will find it and appreciate it.” ANGELA DAWSON (ENTERTAINMENT NEWS WIRE)

Director Moore gives his forthcoming film on capitalism a name

TITLES | Michael Moore’s latest documentary now has a title — and a theme that resonates with recession-weary audiences.

Moore’s look at the consequences of big business will be called “Capitalism: A Love Story.” The documentary is due in theaters Oct. 2.

Distributor Overture Films said “Capitalism” examines the disastrous effects of corporate profiteering.

“It will be the perfect date movie,” Moore said. “It’s got it all — lust, passion, romance and 14,000 jobs being eliminated every day. It’s a forbidden love, one that dare not speak its name. Heck, let’s just say it: It’s capitalism.”

The filmmaker scored a $100 million hit with 2004’s “Fahrenheit 9/11” and won an Academy Award for his 2002 gun-control documentary “Bowling for Columbine.” (AP)

BOX OFFICE Bruno Beats Borat A gay Austrian fashion devotee has proven he has serious box-office clout. Sacha Baron Cohen’s mockumentary “Bruno” took in $30.4 million to lead the weekend for Hollywood. The bawdy flick outpaced the $26.5 million opening weekend for his surprise 2006 hit “Borat,” in which he played a clueless Kazakh journalist touring America. “Ice Age: Dawn of the Dinosaurs” was No. 2 for the weekend with $28.5 million; “Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen” was third. Bastille Day Bubbly

France's revolution launched 220 years ago. Here's where to celebrate it now

A VOTRE SANTE | Tomorrow is Bastille Day — which is a great excuse to hit up some of D.C.'s French restaurants for celebratory drinks.

Our favorite is Poste, the classy brasserie that happens to have a great happy hour on weekdays from 4 to 7 p.m. You can get $5 red and white wine, $5 beer and most importantly, $5 truffled frites.

If you're in the mood for champagne, try Napoleon, where the upstairs bar slings half-priced champagne cocktails between 5 and 7 p.m. on weekdays. You can also get $4 glasses of wine and $2 off domestic beers. Tomorrow features food specials: buy-one-get-

Drums Without Drums

The Capital Fringe Festival isn't just about bizarre performance art pieces. It also includes myriad workshops, like the Beatboxing 101 class tonight from D.C. hip-hop master Christylez Bacon, pictured. Learn how to make yourself into a one-person percussion section. Impress your friends! Startle your enemies! Be really useful when someone says, "Drumroll, please!" Or just, you know, have some fun. F.Z.

2 That's Musical Evolution

Sometimes rock musicians decide they're better than the bands that made them famous, and sometimes these people hook up with alpha-musicians from other bands and form supergroups, which is what happened with the Dead Weather. Jack White of the White Stripes, Allison Mosshart of the Kills and a couple other heavy hitters got together to make alternative rock and take over the world. F.Z.

3 Holding Out for a Hero

With all these angsty superhero movies abounding — we are looking at you here, Batman — it's nice to go back to just a few years ago when a comic book flick could be all about camaraderie and explosions. For a trip down nostalgia road, check out the free screening of "X-Men" in Crystal City, part of the neighborhood's superhero movie festival. Or wait until September to see "The Dark Knight," if you must. F.Z.

Keep It Loud and Light

Wendy Williams takes her signature fluffy talk to daytime TV

OVER-THE-TOP | If you want to get to know Wendy Williams, talk show glamazon, you don't exactly have to pry. "Coy" isn't part of her repertoire.

Just consider her office at the mid-Manhattan studio where she tapes the weekday "Wendy Williams Show," which starts Monday (10 a.m., Fox, and BET weeknights at 11 p.m.). She is a high-rev reflection of her surroundings: fuchsia, leopard skin and, for good measure, a sparkling chandelier.

Williams says her new show is just for fun — nothing serious allowed.

Williams is a veteran radio DJ and talk-show host whose "Wendy Williams Experience" is heard by about 12 million nationwide. She has published several books, including a memoir.

Now, after a fling on VH1, she's taking on TV, big time. On her new show, she promises a party; guests — celebrity and otherwise (Vanessa Williams is Monday's guest); fashion and cooking segments; gossip and other "Hot Topics"; and lots of interaction with her studio audience.

"I like to entertain people," she says. "This is not a heavyweight show. I'm not here to talk political or split the atom." FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

Anxious and Depressed?

Consider participation in a research study

1-877-MIND-NIH

(1-877-646-3644)

email: moodresearch@mail.nih.gov

If you (or someone you know) have been diagnosed with major depression and have anxiety symptoms, you may be able to participate in an NIMH research study that seeks to decrease symptoms of depression and understand the causes of anxious depression. Anxiety symptoms may include tension, worry, apprehension, restlessness, or loss of appetite.

This study evaluates the effectiveness and safety of the study drug AZD2327, in the treatment of major depression and anxiety symptoms. This drug has a different mechanism of action from commonly used SSRI's (selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors) for anxiety and depression. There is the chance of receiving placebo in this study.

After study completion, NIMH will provide short-term follow-up care, and then you will return to the care of your own provider.

Participants should:

- ♦ Be ages 18-65
- ♦ Be diagnosed with major depression and have anxiety symptoms.
- ♦ Be able to participate in a 12 week-outpatient study including an inpatient stay of 7 days in Bethesda, MD.

In addition, all research participation is without cost.

- ♦ Monetary compensation for procedures.
- ♦ Transportation reimbursement provided.

Some employers have blocked access to Web sites such as Facebook and Gmail in an attempt to increase productivity but have annoyed many employees, too.

An Ironic Web Twist

Workplace blockers halt goofing off but hinder productivity

BACKFIRE | Ryan Tracy thought he'd entered the Dark Ages when he graduated from college and arrived in the working world.

His employer blocked access to Facebook, Gmail and other popular Internet sites. He had no wireless access for his laptop and often ran to a nearby cafe on work time so he could use its Wi-Fi connection to send large files.

Sure, the barriers did what his employer intended: They stopped him and his colleagues from using work time to goof around online. But Tracy says the rules also got in the way of legitimate work he needed to do as a scientific analyst for a health care services company.

"It was a constant battle between the people that saw technology as an advantage and those that saw it as a hindrance," says the 27-year-old Chicagoan, who now works for a different company.

He was sure there had to be a better way. It's a common complaint from young people who join the work force with the expectation that their bosses will embrace technology as much as they do.

Then some discover that sites they're supposed to be researching for work are blocked. Or they can't take a little down time to read a news story online or check their personal e-mail or social networking accounts.

So, some are wondering: Could companies take a different approach — without compromising security or workplace efficiency — that allows some of the online access that younger employees, in particular, crave?

"It's no different than spending too much time around the water cooler or making too many personal phone calls. Do you take those away? No," says Gary Rudman, president of GTR Consulting, a market research firm that tracks the habits of young people.

"These two worlds will continue to collide until there's a mutual understanding that performance, not Internet usage, is what really matters." MARTHA IRVINE (AP)

B.I.O.

BY INVITATION ONLY: UPCOMING WEDDINGS & UNIONS

Jay Briar, Alvin Figer

Jay, 33, is a history teacher. Alvin, 30, is a math teacher. They live in Bethesda.

- The Main Event: On Aug. 9, Jay's friend who is a United Church of Christ minister will officiate the ceremony in Calverton, Md.; 150 guests are invited.
- How They Met: At Twenties Group in Dupont, a social discussion gathering Alvin says is a bar-scene alternative.
- First Impressions: Alvin says: "I thought he was cute in his orange jacket." Jay says: "I thought he was the 'cool' guy in the group and looked like he'd be a lot of fun to hang out with."

- First Date: Dinner at Romano's Macaroni Grill.
- How He Proposed: Jay took Alvin out to dinner but couldn't find the right moment to propose — there were too many people around. He proposed later that night in their hot tub.
- Their Song: "Dream a Little Dream of Me" by Mama Cass.
- Pet Names: "We call each other MP, short for 'my partner,'" Alvin says.
- When He Knew: "When he kind of broke into my school to decorate my classroom for Valentine's Day," Jay says.
- Family Traditions: They both come from Christian families, but they want to dance the Hora "so that we can finally be on the chairs instead of lifting them!"

"We want to dance the Hora so we can finally be on the chairs instead of lifting them!"

All Grown Up

Everyone has a friend or two who married his or her high-school sweetheart. But SAM NEWTON and EBONY POWELL were sixth-grade sweethearts. After she met him through a mutual friend, "we concluded that we had a crush on one another and decided to be boyfriend and girlfriend," she says. "I knew she was going to be my girl!" Sam says. But two and a half years later, the couple were parted by evil forces: Her family moved away. They rarely saw each other in the years after, but in 2001, he called her. "He looked very nice and all grown up," Ebony says. When he saw her that day, he knew, again, that they were meant to be together.

Sam, 28, is a driver for MetroAccess. Ebony, 28, is a teacher registry representative. They live in Capitol Heights and will wed July 18 in Kinston, N.C.

Stephen Matta, Lisa Virgona

Stephen, 25, is a software engineer. Lisa, 25, is an architect. They live in Arlington.

- The Main Event: A Catholic wedding in Lisa's hometown of Tenafly, N.J., and a black-tie-optional reception with 135 guests on July 18.
- Honeymoon: St. Maarten, then Disney World, then one week back at work, then a friend's wedding and then Disneyland. "We're super-excited about Disney," Lisa says. "My wallet hurts," Stephen says.
- How They Met: At freshman orientation at Catholic University. They made the trip to the Pentagon City mall together to buy speakers for his computer.

"I'm sure I'll forget to wear some important part of my tux, like the pants."

Instead, they ended up on the Mall, talking by the Reflecting Pool. "We ended up finally buying speakers ... months later."

- First Impressions: "Lisa was the first person I've felt so comfortable with."
- First Date: Uno Chicago Grill at Union Station. "I told him if he paid, that would mean we were officially dating."
- How He Proposed: In front of the East Wing of the National Gallery of Art. They'd hit up a Nats game, so she was wearing her jersey. "How romantic," Lisa says.
- Pet Names: "Sometimes I call him 'Chunks' because he's so skinny."
- Wedding Jitters: Stephen says he's sure he'll forget an important part of his tux, "like the pants."

Adrian Ferguson, Tamara Pernel

Adrian, 25, is a government contractor. Tamara, 29, works for the D.C. government. They live in Alexandria.

- The Main Event: Tamara's stepfather, a Baptist pastor, will preside over the semiformal ceremony on Aug. 15 in Indianapolis.
- Honeymoon: The Dominican Republic.
- How They Met: At a networking event for young professionals. She thought he was staring at her; he thought she was staring at him "like she was near-sighted or crazy." When he introduced himself formally ("Hello, my name is Adrian Ferguson"), she replied with a, "What up? I'm Tammy," and a fist bump. "A little weird, but I was open-minded," he says.

- First Impressions: "Who is the guy that keeps staring at me? He actually isn't too bad-looking."

- First Date: Ben's Chili Bowl on Valentine's Day.
- How He Proposed: The power went out on Duke Street where they were both living in separate apartments. Tamara didn't want to stay by herself, so she went to Adrian's place, which was lit by just a battery-operated lamp. He asked her to pray with him, then got down on one knee. She said, "Are you serious?!" before saying yes.

- Making It Unique: They're hiring an ice cream truck for their reception.
- Wedding Jitters: "The reception site is foreclosed!" Tamara says.
- With Unlimited Funds: They'd hire MC Lyte, Slick Rick and LL Cool J.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Don't try to overextend yourself — physically, emotionally or financially. Personal resources must be guarded well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Now is no time to take chances where feelings are concerned. Indeed, the role you may want to play is that of protector.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're in the mood for something new and, perhaps, a little unusual. Not everyone will understand why you want to explore the unexplored.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You can find bargains everywhere, provided you're willing to look — and know, to begin with, what you really want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Tend to your own business, and others are likely to tend to their own — until after dark, when someone you know gets a little nosy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Someone close to you is likely to put it all on the line, making his or her feelings very plain and asking you to do the same.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) An authority figure, perhaps a parent, may have trouble understanding the dream you've been pursuing. Perhaps you should try for more.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) If you can devise a way of being in two places at once, you should have your problems solved. In reality, how likely is that?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You may stumble on the solution to a stubborn mystery quite by accident. As a result, you may find yourself pursuing a new goal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) A mix-up of sorts has you working at cross-purposes with someone who is usually after the same things you are after. Untangle this tricky knot.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may be involved in something that puts another in danger. As soon as you discover the truth, you'll know what to do.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You may be asking for something that a certain someone is not able to give — yet. Perhaps a little patience will win you what you want.

CARRIE UNDERWOOD will headline a Salute to the Troops Concert Aug. 14 at Fort Campbell, on the Kentucky-Tennessee border. A spokeswoman for Underwood says the show is one of only a few live performances she is doing this summer as she works on a new album. The performance kicks off the Week of the Eagles, a celebration honoring the Screaming Eagles of the 101st Airborne Division. (AP)

'Scream' Actor Now Too Old For Fans to Recognize Him

DAVID ARQUETTE is going to live in a box in New York City to raise money for the hungry. The 37-year-old actor plans to stay in a Plexiglas box above the Madison Square Garden marquee on Tuesday and Wednesday to raise $250,000 for Feeding America, the nation's largest domestic hunger relief charity. He'll stay in the box each day for about eight hours. (AP)
